Transition to new broadcasting facility called for collaboration among engineering and technology teams

COLUMBUS, Ohio (Sep 21, 2022) — When the viewers and listeners of WOSU Public Media's television and radio programs tuned in over the last year, they would have been unaware of the massive technical changes happening behind the scenes at the Columbus broadcasting operation.

Working collaboratively with the Broadcast Educational Media Commission \(BEMC\), the Ohio Academic Resources Network (OARnet) and The Ohio State University, WOSU Public Media moved from its long-time home at Ohio State's Fawcett Center to a state-of-the-art building located just east of campus at the corner of 14th Avenue and Pearl Street. Although the project required years of planning, construction and a carefully orchestrated transition of equipment, WOSU maintained seamless and uninterrupted broadcasts to the community throughout the process.

Now fully operational, WOSU's new headquarters are designed to welcome the public into the broadcasting space, where they can participate in events and tour cutting-edge radio and television studios.
